A Week Of War

A DEPART. OF INFORMATION BULLETIN

Germany's object in the war with Russia is twofold: First, the elimination of the potential menace in the east which an intact Red Army always represented, and secondly, the acquisition of the grain supplies of the Ukraine and the oil of the Caucasus.

While a substantial part of the German army and air force is being employed in the east, the pressure on Great Britain at home and in the Middle East must be relaxed, but the degree of this advantage will depend on the efficiency of the Red Army and Air Force.

The Germans have planned for a quick victory, but if Russia can preserve her army and air force until the winter sets in, two months hence, she will have made an important contribution to the anti-German cause. On the other hand, if the Germans smash the Red forces, it will allow them to concentrate against Britain all their resources, strengthened immeasurably by the wheat and oil taken from Southern Russia.

RUSSIA'S STRENGTH

UNCERTAIN

Widely divergent reports are current about Russian military and air strength but it is generally believed that the Russian military machine is inferior to the German.

An American commentator estimates that Stalin can at once deploy 154 divisions, including 32 armoured divisions, on the German border. Estimates recently made placed German forces on this front at 120 divisions. If Roumanian, Hungarian and Finnish troops were to be added to this figure, it would not give Russia a great numerical superiority.

Besides the divisions now mobilised, the Soviet Government has an immense reserve of trained manpower, estimated by some observers at 12,000,000 men. Germany's immediate aim will therefore be to defeat the main Russian army in the field before these reserves of manpower can be thrown into the struggle.

Thirty-two Russian armoured divisions would give Russia a considerable superiority in tanks. The Germans are therefore meeting for the first time a power which has more tanks than they have.

RUSSIA'S DEFENSIVE

LINE

Russia's occupation of Poland and the Baltic States during 1939 and 1940 enabled the construction of forward posts 150 miles in advance of the old Russian frontier.

The delimitation of the frontier also gave Russia certain strategic advantages, the main one being the interposing of the whole of the Pripet Marshes as a barrier against the German advance. Prior to 1939, only the eastern part of the Marshes was controlled by the Soviet Government.

The original Russian defensive position, sometimes referred to as the "Stalin Line," ran down the frontier from the Russian naval base of Kronstadt in the Gulf of Finland to Odessa on the Black Sea. It has been described as a "Line" mainly in imitation of the Siegfried, Maginot and Mannerheim lines, but actually bears little resemblance to these strongly fortified positions. Precise information is not available, but it is believed to consist of a loosely knit defensive system in depth based on isolated strong points which serve as headquarters and control centres.

Experts believe that the Russian troops occupy-system westward and can therefore be withdrawn back on to it.

The difficulties of conquering a country as vast as Russia, with a total population of more than 180,000,000 have not changed.

Possession of Moscow would extend German lines of communication for 600 miles beyond the furthest point eastwards at present occupied by the Germans, but would bring them only to the extreme western fringe of the Soviet Union. Many of the country's greatest industrial resources are concentrated in the Urals, hundreds of miles further east.

Germany could destroy all the cities in the first 300 miles of Russian territory on which she entered without materially affecting the life of more than a small part of Russia's millions.

This makes the defeat of Russia a much more difficult task than any Hitler has so far undertaken.

RUSSIANS FIGHTING STUBBORNLY

The Germans admit that the Russians are fighting with stubborn valour. The "Times" correspondent at Istanbul states that the Russians have brought the German operations practically to a standstill from the Carpathians to the Black Sea. While the Germans state their operations are progressing favourably according to schedule, the Russians claim that they are holding them everywhere, and that the Germans have made no substantial advance. It is believed, however, that the operations so far are merely preliminary to the big clash between the main bodies of the two armies.

NEWS OF FIGHTING

CONFUSED

There is very little detailed news of the progress of the fighting. One German thrust was made north-easterly into Lithuania, the long-range objective being Leningrad, and the cutting off of the Baltic provinces of Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia, with their Baltic coastline and ports. Revolutionary forces in these States are reported to be assisting the Germans.

Thrusting north-east from into Russian Poland is another which is apparently the southern an encircling movement intended off Lwow and the southern of Poland, which fell to Russia marched west soon after the Polish. Extremely heavy fire said to be in progress along the front.

In the south, German and Russian divisions have crossed the river which separates Bessarabia and via. They are moving in two the northern directed at Kiev Ukraine, and the southern the Russian port on the Black

ROYAL AIR FORCE OFFENSIVE

The Royal Air Force offensive German naval and industrial being continued with renewed since the German declaration of Russia. For fourteen successive record numbers of heavy bombs dropped hundreds of tons of explosives and scores of thousand incendiaries, causing widespread and destruction. Cologne, Kiel, the Ruhr, Wilhelmshaven, the Channel Ports have suffered. A gratifying feature for Britons very low percentage of bombers not return from these raids."

In addition to these bombing the Royal Air Force during the days has launched ten daylight sive over German-occupied bombing aerodromes and objectives far inland. In the re-fighting, the escorting fighters down 112 German fighters of 26 British machines, with safe. There has been a lull in the Channel Ports to the east transfer of bombers to the east.

THE CAMPAIGN IN SOUTHERN FRANCE

The capture of Damascus and the collapse of French resistance in Beirut are expected to mark the stage of French efforts to prevent British occupation of Syria. Experts believe that the main French positions should shortly be in British hands.

General Dentz has been attempting to prevent the British occupation of the town by a relatively small force. It is that the greater part of the force able to him have been concentrated to the defence of Beirut, Rayak and Damascus as the three key points forces advancing from Palestine pass. Commentators believe unlikely to prolong the struggle the Damascus-Rayak-Beirut gone.

RABBI IN THE COMMUNITY

Rabbi Dr. Saenger spoke at the publicity meeting held by the committee of the Jewish War Effort Circle at the Kadimah last Sunday afternoon, 29th of June.

The Rabbi urged the establishment of a branch of the Jewish War Effort Circle North of the Yarra, and explained the special significance of a British victory to Jewish people all over the world.

Address at a Jewish War Effort Circle Meeting

At the Publicity Meeting of the Jewish War Effort Circle, at the Kadimah Hall on Sunday 29th June Rabbi Dr. Saenger, in his address praised the magnificent work done by the Jewish War Effort Circle, and said: "Whatever we Jews may do, no matter how great the sacrifice we make, it can never be too much. For if it was ever true of any war, this is indeed the struggle on which depend the freedom and the rights, yea the very lives of our people all over the world."

This is not only a British war, this is not an Anglo-American war for the freedom of opinion and the freedom of belief—it is our war too! If there was ever any doubt about it, it can exist no longer. Look at Europe now—humiliated broken by torture as she is—there is oppression in Czechoslovakia and Poland, Norway and Denmark are in chains there is starvation and misery in Holland and Belgium and slavery in France. But great though the sufferings of these countries may be, there is no nation nor country in the world whose martyrdom equals that of the Jews, wherever Hitler has established his power. Other people had at least a certain minimum of power, they had their leaders to defend their vital interests. Our people were without power, without leaders and without defence. It is up to us prove now that they are not without friends and brothers.

We Jews living in the Democratic countries have been spared so far, and perhaps we have been spared just for a time like this, to share the fight for freedom with the British Empire and America, to save the future of the Jewish people and redeem the honour of the Jewish name.

SECRET CLAUSE IN TREATY

Do you know what they are doing to our people over there now, to men and women like you and me, who have been used to leading the well-ordered comfortable lives of the middle-class type of professional and business men? borders of Spain, from Warsaw to Paris. Borders Spain, from Warsaw to Paris, they are wearing yellow armbands—living in Ghettos and have to do hard labour like galley slaves. They are herded together in huge concentration camps called "reservations." Did you know that there exists a secret clause in the French Armistice terms, which puts Madagascar at the disposal of the Nazis so that it may become for all Jews of Europe, the largest concentration camp the world has ever seen, and within France men and women who have committed no greater sin than to be Jews, have now lived behind wire since the Armistice. They up in the Pyrenees, without shelter, in long-day constructed huts without floors or sanitation, never enough food, their clothes in rags and tatters.

But the height of Nazi tyranny even children have been treated the same way. In every war so far the unwritten law—Children In Rivesaltes, in France, a 3,000 children has been established, they live in inadequate and a Red Cross observer says that these children were living conditions which no Zoo would fit for its animals. And to the other day, 20 little children between 2 and 6 months old, rents were probably murdered left to be cared for by the unfortunate or to die.

THE FATE IN STORE
Let us think of them who from undisturbed slumber emerging to go to work, to play our economic life of a land where powerful protection of the British is freedom, justice and for all. Under this flag, we men and boys—your fathers—bands, your sons and brothers gone to fight against the forces which threaten the world.

Talmud Torah "Hascola"

Distribution of School Prizes

There were a very enthusiastic attendance—both of pupils and parents—at the "Hascola's" Annual Distribution of School Prizes last Sunday afternoon, 22nd June, in the School Hall. After the rendering of the National Anthem, the President, Mr. D. M. Tugend, welcomed the visitors including Rabbi J. L. Gurewicz, Rabbi J. Danglow, and Mr. Harry Halprin, President Bar-Kahn Ex-Students' Group. An apology was received from Rev. W. Rechter. Mr. Tugend expressed his complete satisfaction of the continued progress of the School during the past twelve months, and he congratulated the School Superintendent, Mr. A. Lasky, and the Teachers for what had been achieved, and he thanked Mrs. M. Solomon, President, and the Committee of the Ladies' Guild for their co-operation.

Rabbi J. L. Gurewicz addressed the children in Yiddish, and he pointed out to them the importance of being interested in their Hebrew and Religious studies, and the great value of acquiring this knowledge for their future.

Rabbi J. Danglow delivered a very inspiring homely talk to the children, and in the course of his remarks expressed his complete satisfaction with the results of his inspection and examination of the pupils last December. Rabbi Danglow said the children were genuinely interested in their Hebrew studies, and he congratulated the School Superintendent Mr. A. Lasky, the Head Master, Mr. M. Aisen, and Teachers Messrs. S. Rudzki and A. Feiglin, for the pupils' intelligent answers to his questions and for their correct Hebrew reading. In concluding his interesting speech Rabbi Danglow expressed his pleasure for the close personal interest of the President and the Committee in the welfare and progress of the pupils.

Mr. A. Lasky, School Superintendent, gave a detailed report for the past twelve months. He expressed his satisfaction for the marvellous results achieved during the year on account of the alteration to the curriculum, which gave more time to the reading of Hebrew. Mr. Lasky made an appeal to the parents to evince the same interest for the welfare of the School as their children do in their Hebrew studies. He likewise congratulated the Teachers for what had been achieved, and thanked Mrs. M. Solomon, President, and the Ladies' Guild for their splendid co-operation in entertaining the children at various functions including the great parties on the occasions of Chanukah, Purim, and Picnic last March.

Mr. Harry Halprin, President, Bar-Kahn Ex-Students' Group, expressed his pleasure in being present and explained the formation of his Group three years ago to commemorate their great teacher whose favorite subject was Hebrew history so that the children would be instilled with an intelligent knowledge of our race and traditions.

Laws Without Justice

HITLER'S DECREES ARE GERMANY'S STATUTES

The vast superstructure of British law has so long conditioned manner of life that we tend to accept it as something that is integral to any scheme of civilisation. "The law is an ass," said one of Dickens' characters. We, too, tend to be irritated—or amused—at its tortuousness.

And we tend to forget that our great mass of laws, for all their idiosyncrasies is the best protection for the maintenance of democracy.

The basis of the law can be changed. In Germany it has been changed with the one purpose of disfranchising the individual from those rights which democratic subjects have accepted so glibly and so long as a matter of course.

Nazi law ignores the basic safeguards of the rights of free speech, freedom of worship and impartial justice. Justice is that which serves the interest of the German nation, not the interest of the individual. In the transition stage from the old Civil Law code to what has been termed a "People's Code" judgements are loosely based on the principles of National Socialism.

Thus: "If the wording of a law which cannot be interpreted in another way contradicts National Socialist legal principles, the judge may, in exceptional circumstances, decide against the law if the statutory law is not in accord with sane popular feeling." (Senator Dr. Rothenberger).

The necessary corollary is that "only National Socialists can be good judges. The party programme is valid law and, as such, is to be observed by the judge. Out of date precedents are to be replaced by utterances of the Fuehrer."

This decree postulates principles of adjudication which are sufficient in themselves to overturn the laboriously built structure of individual rights.

It is not a very long step to a further simplification.

"In Penal Law, sloppy humanitarian ideas which came to us from the West are overcome and we return to the old Germanic legal ideas which embodied sufficient harshness to exterminate pests in the community." (Voelkischer Beobachter).

As a result, no less than 23 crimes are now legally punishable by death in Germany while the Gestapo stands entirely outside German law.

The third cornerstone of Nazi law states that the law must always promote German interests at the expense of those of other peoples. "Germany's people."

The weaker must always serve stronger. The position for example of Poles, or negroes in the colonies (Germany has colonies) "must be considered, under criminal law, from the point of view of the supremacy of German people."

This effectively wipes out the democratic tradition of equal rights.

Dr. Gunther Hecht blames "far-sighted democratic liberties granted to coloured people under the old-style colonial system for the constant friction between coloured and white people. German policy will be to establish a firm and order from the start which defines the position of the native unequivocally. The racial barrier will, of course, be severe and without compromise."

Finally, any means may be used to attain the end. In Holland, persons judged under laws promulgated by Reichskommissar for the Netherlands valid within Germany, and laws. As a basic principle the which provides the severest punishment will be applied. Poles, the Nazi administration has decided, are especially inclined to violence, and therefore laws must be enforced with extreme severity. Conversely, as a member of the superior race, the German must be treated leniently when he commits a crime against a Pole.

A German employer in a German court was found guilty of stealing a Polish workman but he was acquitted "because the Polish people, by means of 60,000 Germans, proved that they were a wicked people, and a Pole must not be permitted to triumph over a German."

Neither common law nor logic has a place in the Nazi philosophy.

Provisional Direction Jewish Affairs In Occupied France

On May 8th, a "Provisional Direction" for Jewish Affairs has been set up in occupied France by the Nazi Gauleiter Jewish Affairs in the occupied areas, Danacker. It is learned here Paris. It has been placed under direction of M. Sachs, Secretary of former Jewish Consistory.

Through a number of Viennese Jewish communal workers have been sent to Paris to assist M. Sachs, the situation remains in an embryonic state because of the opposition of the Jewish leaders. Despite violent protests many Jewish leaders have refused to sign a document recognising the need for the "unification of Jewish communities."

Meanwhile, there has appeared, the editorship of M. Sachs, "Instructions Juives"—the first Jewish paper to be published in France since the Armistice.

REVIEW

Shakespeare wrote: "The Man, who no Music in Himself is fit for him," he was echoing a trait of man. The appreciation of music is universal. Dr. Keith Barry, the Australian Counselor of Programmes on the Australian Broadcasting Commission has written a book which is adequately described as a Guide to Musical Understanding. An introduction to the book has been written by Professor Heinze. There are chapters covering every aspect of music. It is written in a way easily read. It should be in the hands of every child capable of appreciating music. And it can be read with pleasure by every adult. In these days of wireless broadcasting the book is especially welcome. "Music and the Mind" by Dr. Keith Barry. Price 3d. There are 130 pages. It comes from the publishers, Robertson and Mullens, 107 Elizabeth Street, Melbourne.

"ETERNAL ISRAEL"

By SHLOMO KATZ

It happened on a bus in the state of Texas. As far as one could judge there was only one other Jewish passenger besides myself. He had boarded the bus in a little town on the Mexican border. He spoke English with a difficulty at once apparent when the conductor asked him for his ticket. As soon as he sat down, he began to probe the other passengers with his gaze and after each examination his eyes returned to rest on me. Once he even tried to move up to my seat, but the conductor said something and his immediate neighbour explained to him that he must not change his seat while the bus was in motion. He then obediently resumed his seat.

Some time later we stopped at a small town for a brief rest and all the passengers went out to stretch their legs. He approached me at once and began to speak Spanish. I did not understand, but I noticed the edge of a Yiddish newspaper protruding from his coat pocket. "You may speak Yiddish," I assured him.

He was overjoyed. "A Jew? I thought you were Mexican. I am from Mexico. I am so glad there is another Jew on the bus. Now there'll be someone to talk to!"

We reentered the bus and he took a seat near me. He was bubbling with enthusiasm. "That's better. We'll be able to talk things over. What do you say? Isn't it so, señor?" And he at once proceeded to "talk things over."

"I have been living in Mexico for twenty years now and I have a business there two stores as a matter of fact. I have a brother in New York and I haven't seen him for thirty years. So I thought to myself, I'll take a trip and see him."

"How are Jews getting along in Mexico?" I asked.

"So so. One earns a peso."

I felt relieved. As long as one earns a peso there is no longer any cause to worry about Mexico or its Jews.

"A wonderful land, Mexico," my companion resumed, "just like in the old country. Simple people, like children. They have no idea of the values of money. If they want something, they spend their last cent on it. Take me, for instance, I have a pants store. When a Mexican comes in to buy a pair of pants he seldom knows anything about styles. Pants are pants to him. If he needs them he'll pick up the first pair he sees and buy it. A wonderful country, like I said. I'd much rather live there than in the States. But after twenty years, I thought to myself, it may be a good idea to see my brother in New York."

"And all these years," I wondered, "you did not care enough to go to see your brother? Weren't you curious to see the United States?"

"The States?" he answered ironically. "Do you think I don't know what the States are like? Let me tell you, this is the first time I am here, but I know exactly what New York will look like and what the whole country is like. I read papers published in America all these years and I know exactly how everything looks. To tell you the truth," he continued in a confidential tone, "I probably wouldn't have gone even now if it wasn't for my daughter."

I was surprised. What had his daughter in Mexico City to do with the trip?

"I have a daughter," he told me. "A beautiful daughter. She is now twenty years old. So I thought I'd take a trip to my brother in New York and at the same time I'd look around, maybe I'll find some elegant young man... In that case I am ready to go with me and give him one of my stores."

The expression "elegant young man" intrigued me. But as I touched my face I felt the 36-hour growth of stiff beard that decorated it and decided that I must remain objective, for at the moment there was not much "elegance" about me.

"Aren't there enough young men in Mexico City?" I asked.

"Oh, no. There are plenty of young men," he reassured me. "But they aren't very young any longer, mostly between thirty-five and forty. And my daughter is only twenty and a beautiful girl. Let me explain it to you. Jews began to arrive in Mexico about 20 years ago. Many young boys also came at that time to seek their fortune. Now that they have become established and have money, they are already not so young. But who wants their money? I ask you, do I have to marry my daughter to some old bachelor on account of his money?"

I immediately agreed that he did not have to, that as a matter of fact, it would be the wrong thing to do.

"On the other hand, there are some nice Jewish boys growing up in Mexico. Some day they will be really elegant young men. They attend Jewish and also to join in the repast. "Don't worry, young man," he consoled me while chewing his delicacies. "I see that you are educated in Jewish matters, not like other American boys. You must know then what the Bible says: 'Israel is eternal.' Today Jews are beaten in one place and they live in peace in another. Tomorrow Jews will be beaten in Mexico and they will live peacefully in Guatemala. That's the way it has always been, but Jews will not disappear from the earth. One shouldn't get too—how do you say it in the States?—excited. Naturally, it is a hard time, that's why we must help. Just look at me. I contribute every year for the Palestine funds and when somebody comes asking money for some Jewish institution, I also don't let him leave the house empty-handed; and I get two Jewish papers in my house, one from New York and the other published in Mexico City."

"And your daughter? Does she have no say in the matter?"

"God forbid!" he hastily apologized. "If she doesn't like him she won't have to marry him. But why shouldn't she like him? What's the matter, am I blind. Do you think I can't judge the character of a young man? My daughter is a sensible girl and I am sure that when I bring a nice, elegant, Jewish young man she will like him too."

The bus came to a halt in a small town. I bought the afternoon paper. There was bad news from Roumania and England.

"What do the papers say?" he asked me. I told him the contents of the latest dispatches. He nodded his head regretfully, sighed, but at once regained a philosophic composure: "Don't worry, we'll survive this too, and Hitler, may he rot, will meet his proper end yet."

Meanwhile he untied one of his bundles, took out a considerable and varied quantity of food—roast meat, different kinds of fruit and cake—and invited me

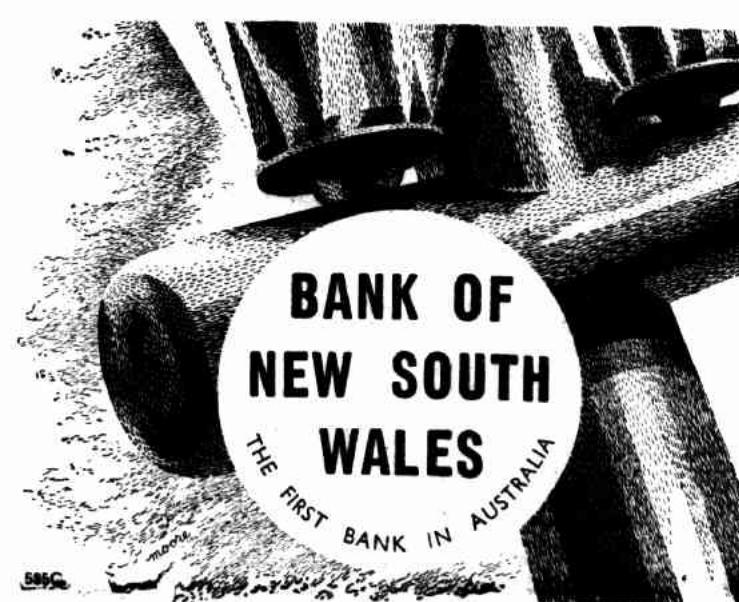

"I am telling you, all those who talk about the danger that Jews may be exterminated are fools. They can't kill all the Jews. A people can't be killed. What then? Assimilation? Nonsense! What do I care if my daughter speaks Spanish or if you, for instance, speak English? Jews have talked all kinds of languages already, Arabic and Aramaic and German. So they will now talk English and Spanish as well. What do I care? It's no calamity."

He complacently wiped a few crumbs from his mouth. "The main thing, one makes a living. And, God willing, my brother will help me in New York. He is in Williamsburg,

"It's all right. Jews are always Jews. Sometimes conditions are better and sometimes worse, and sometimes they get to be very bad. But there are always some Jews who make a living and marry off their children, and they will continue to marry off their children. Believe me, the world is not coming to an end yet."

Music In Melbourne

Music - Lovers' Treat

The first of a series of three subscription concerts by the New Melbourne String Orchestra, under the baton of Dr. H. Schildberger, presented to Melbourne's music lovers last Thursday evening, was as fine a programme as I have heard in Melbourne of recent date.

The programme itself was admirably conceived for balance, the Hall (The Samuel Myers, in Charnwood Crescent), had good acoustics, and the items were rendered with polish and understanding. The orchestra is rapidly growing into an ensemble of major importance, and the excellent performance on Thursday left me well satisfied. I was particularly glad to see Mr. S. Shiffron at the bass. He is also a gifted pianist and fine musician and his bass gave good foundation to the Orchestra.

The appearance of Miss Jean Starling was something to which I had looked forward since hearing the performance that enabled her to win the piano competition final, held in the Melbourne Town Hall about a year ago.

She has naturalness of manner, good technique, a mature attack, and a fine grasp of the Composer's theme. These qualities were particularly brought out in the second item of the programme, Bach's D Minor piano concerto. This work particularly requires interpretative powers of the artist, and there were many passages that were pure Bach. It is difficult to single out passages, as each of the three movements had gems. One that I particularly recollect was a staccato piano sequence to a pizzicato string background in the first (allegro) movement.

Sustained trills in the adagio movement were beautifully executed.

She fully deserved the enthusiastic applause this finely conceived Bach offering received.

The orchestra was admirable, in this, as in the previous number, Handel's Concerto Grosso in D Major (No. 5). This gave me a new appreciation and understanding of Handel. The sparkling fourth movement (allegro) and the stately minuet fifth (Menuet) were Handel as he is too rarely interpreted here, except by visiting conductors.

The violins were excellent, a fine legato, by the second leader being notable. Jean Starling was at the piano for this, which together with the bass, gave a balancing deep tone to the work.

After the interval Jean Starling gave a very sensitive rendering of Debussy's "Submerged Cathedral." She had the technical equipment, and her fine touch gave almost a poignant note to the delicate passages. The bass sequence interpreting the roll and roar of the waves was also worth high praise. Her ability is really unusual for her years. Dohnanyi's "Ruralia Hungarica" (the second of a series of studies of rural Hungary) gave full scope to exuberance and technique and the well-merited applause brought her back to delightfully render an encore.

I was looking forward to the next two items, a terra incognita for many of the music lovers present. Colin Taylor's "Praeludium and Sarabande," is a fine piece of composition, with marked Puccini influence in parts, the whole almost the type known as chamber or drawing-room music. The muted first violins and the cello pizzicato passages were very appealing compositions finely rendered.

The work is one I could well hear again and again.

Dittersdorf's Concerto in A Major for piano and orchestra, in three movements brought out new qualities in the pianist. This work shows a marked Mozartian influence, and is of the type of delightful salon-music that characterised the period (latter end of the 18th century). This work should also have a repeat performance some time.

I was disappointed that the Hall was not crowded to capacity. The whole programme was of a uniformly high standard, and gratitude must be expressed to Dr. Schildberger, to whom so much of it is due. Not many concerts can be called "treats," but I unhesitatingly append the word to last Thursday's recital. I hope many people will profit by the opportunity of hearing this orchestra, with Angela Parselles, (soprano) as soloist, at the next recital of the series, to take place on 24th July (Thursday) at 8.15 p.m., at the same Hall. Mozart, Mendelssohn, Schubert, Tschaikowsky, Boyce, Bizet, and Verdi, will supply the compositions.

The next concert of the Australian Musical News Chamber Music Club (which sponsors the Victorian String Quartet, whose fine work is so well-known to our readers) will be held on Sunday, July 6, at the Club Rooms of the Music Teachers' Association, fourth floor, Kelvin Hall, 55 Collins Place, Melbourne.

The programme will be given by Miss Elsie Fraser, Pianist, Mischa Kogan, Violinist, and Paul McDermott, Violinist, and will include two trios—Beethoven No. 1, Op. 70, in D Major and Mendelssohn, Op. 49, in D Minor. Brahms Sonata in G Major, Op. 78, will be performed by Elsie Fraser and Paul McDermott.

AUSTRALIAN JEWISH WELFARE SOCIETY CONCERT

Under the auspices of the Australian Jewish Welfare Society, a very interesting Concert was held at the Samuel Myers Hall, St Kilda, on Sunday evening, June 22nd, 1941.

The Artists who generously gave their services were all well-known women musicians of Melbourne, namely Miss Rita Hope, Pianist, Miss Muriel Cheek, Soprano, and Elsie Fraser Accompanist.

A delightful programme was arranged

Lithuanian Yiddish Author Dies

STOCKHOLM, May 8th. The death has occurred in Kaunas, at the age of 62, of the well-known Yiddish writer, Dr. Esther Eljasev, a sister of "Bal-Machshove" (Dr. Isidor Eljasev), famous Yiddish writer and literary critic.

Dr. Esther Eljasev, who was born in Kaunas, studied in Russia and Germany and published a considerable number of works in Yiddish, Russian and German, dealing with literary criticism, the history of art, and social problems. She was also for a number of years a lecturer at the Jewish People's University at Kaunas.

Dr. Eljasev was married to the German-Yiddish writer Hans Weissbart.

and the audience was most appreciative of the good music provided.

Choice offerings by the Singer were songs by Greig (sung with great artistry and finish) old English songs by Purcell and "La Procession" by Cesar Franck.

Rita Hope played "Gavotte" and Variations by Rameau, a difficult Concert piece by Paderevski, and two Charming Salon works for the piano composed by Leschetizky (her former master). Miss Elsie Fraser was a most sympathetic and helpful accompanist.

These evenings are fulfilling a great want in the lives of many people to-day, particularly New Australians, besides being a contributing factor to Patriotic Funds.
